Our Story

'Alaringa' is the name of our organically certified farm, located in southbrook, Queensland, just outside Toowoomba. The farm is owned and run by the moss family, Ian and Sarah, and their two children.

Alaringa Organics has recently expanded in 2009 to include partner Amanda Scibilia and her family who live in the Redlands. Ian and Amanda both met at Gatton Agricultural University in the late 80's in their respective fields of study, and both are driven by their love and wellbeing of animals.

Alaringa Organics, as a small family business, strives to achieve a more personalised shopping experience by listening to our customers and ensuring their needs are consistently met.

Why Eat Organic Meat?

This question can be answered by highlighting the following restrictions placed on organically certified farms by the organic certification bodies in Australia:-

- No herbicides, pesticides, and chemical fertilisers can be used on the farm
- No antibiotics or growth promotants can be fed to the animals
- Genetic modification is banned
- Artificial light is banned
- Animals must be given green pastures to roam for the majority of their lives, and
- Animals must be fed only grass or organically certified feed
